Online workshop

Who's in the room?

Race, Culture and You

For those working in the helping professions

Practical, interactive and reflective, this 1-hour 'taster session'* is designed for those working in the helping professions, looking to explore the significance of responses to race and culture within the context of their work.

This workshop is facilitated by Mary Pascall (MBACP, BAATN), a psychotherapeutic counsellor, facilitator and mentor, working with the transcultural relationship from a person-centred perspective. Mary aims to offer a safe, enabling and creative space. Participants will be given the opportunity to explore the impact of responses to race and culture within the helping relationship.

*Participants may also wish to consider the 2-hour programme.

Participants will be offered:

- a flexible programme within a small group setting
- interactive materials as prompts for discussion
- a certificate of attendance, on request, following completion.
